Mr. Jeff Jordan

Dear Mr. Jordan:

Enclosed is a copy of an illegal endorsement ad by the "Concerned Clergy" that ran in the Indianapolis Recorder "newspaper" four days before the May, 2006 primary election for the seventh congressional district in Indiana.

Note the outright endorsement of candidates for elective offices and, in particular, Congresswoman Julia Carson. Look at Olgen Williams campaign ad and how its placed right next to this illegal endorsement by Carolene Mays and her staff. That's coordination! Carolene Mays knew damn well this ad was illegal but ran it anyway. Again, this is not just a newspaper, it also doubles as campaign material and this ad, in particular, was coordinated with both the Democrat and Republican parties. Mr. Williams is an interesting study. He was pardoned by President Bush and routinely appears with U.S. Attorney Susan Brooks when she speaks about neighborhood violence. He recently sat with her and Attorney General Alberto Gonzales when he came to town a few months ago. And, of course, he's met the president. He a Republican. (Publicly undeclared) Mays is a Democrat who helps everyone, Democrats and Republicans alike-even with illegal campaign ads.

When you're helping someone that the Administration has pardoned and who is acquainted (highly) with the U. S. Attorney, like State Representative Carolene Mays, you don't have much to worry about. But this ad was really about endorsing Julia Carson and keeping the way clear for Carolene Mays.

The question for the Federal Election Commission is who paid for this ad?. I believe State Representative Carolene Mays; and by extension, the owner and her uncle, William G. Mays paid for this ad. Who is the "Concerned Clergy"? They're clearly not endorsing candidates individually. So is this a backdoor way for religious leaders to endorse candidates? When you speak of the "Concerned Clergy" most people think that all black ministers belong to the organization. Like a union of the Black Pastors.

So this is another complaint to supplement the ones that I sent to you in the fall of '06 and January of 2007. This is another complaint against State Representative Carolene Mays and the Indianapolis Recorder. It is also a complaint against the organization called "The Concerned Clergy" and its members.

Finally, I believe this helps prove my charge that there was an organized voter suppression scheme directed at me. I don't believe that I finished that race with only 306 votes. I don't believe Julia Carson received 29,500 plus votes with four (4) other persons running against her in a non-presidential primary in a state with a strict voter I.D. law; and, while the clerk that was running that election, Doris Anne Sadler, was also hiding my court file that is still missing!. Plus, the 2002 election results for the seventh congressional district and the 2006 election results look eerily similar. I don't believe Julia Carson won that general election in the fall of 2006.

The above paragraph is for another agency. I want the F.E.C. to investigate the above ad, who paid for it, who wrote it, who met and decided which candidates they would endorse and anything else that is pertinent and germane to this ad.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Pierre Q. Pullins'. The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name 'Pierre' being more prominent than the last name 'Pullins'.

Politics

BART PETERSON
Mayor of Indianapolis

Age: 49 Greatest achievement: In 1999, he became the first Democratic mayor of Indianapolis in three decades. Why him? Currently president of the National League of Cities, Peterson is visible and popular. His Cultural Initiative is transforming the city. Gossip: Many believe if Dick Lugar retires or Evan Bayh is elected vice president in 2008, Peterson has an excellent shot at becoming the next U.S. senator. Should Governor Daniels win a second term, Peterson would be the frontrunner to succeed him in 2012.

⬆ Despite the current crime wave, he faces only token opposition for a third term this fall.

JULIA CARSON

United States Representative
Age: 69 Greatest achievement: Becoming the first African-American member of Congress from Indianapolis. Why her? Carson is the titular head of what has become the largest Democratic Party organization in Indiana—one that commands a loyal urban base of supporters. Achilles heel: Health. The day she was to be sworn into Congress, she was hospitalized with a heart condition. Recent public pronouncements have been described as rambling, and she has been using a wheelchair on the House floor.

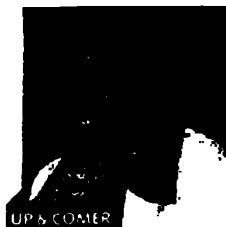

⬆ Her frail condition and unpredictable public comments have prompted speculation that she may soon retire.

JAMES BRAINARD
Mayor of Carmel

Age: 53 Greatest achievement: Expanding Carmel parks from 40 to 700 acres while building the Monon Trail and other popular greenways. He is also the catalyst in building a new downtown. Why him? He has transformed Carmel from just another suburb into a cultural gem. The Hamilton County town was recently listed by Money magazine as one of the top 10 places to live in the Midwest. Gossip: Asked about other jobs, Brainard would not rule out a run for governor, saying, "I prefer the executive branch."

⬆ Brainard is wrapping up 55 annexations that will put Carmel's population at 85,000.

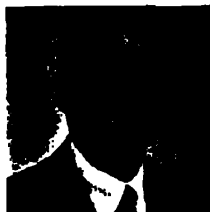

CAROLENE MAYS

Member, Indiana House of Representatives

Age: 46 Greatest achievement: The victim of an abusive husband, Mays pushed through domestic-violence legislation that had languished for years in the General Assembly. Why her? The niece of industrialist Bill Mays, Carolene serves on the powerful House Ways & Means Committee and is the publisher of the Indianapolis Recorder. Gossip: Mays will be on the short list when the time comes to replace U.S. Representative Julia Carson.

⬆ She has already been recognized as a "rising star" by the Capitol Hill newspaper Roll Call.

MIKE O'CONNOR

Chairman, Marion County Democratic Party

Age: 43 Greatest achievement: Improving the environment. As IDEM commissioner, he increased the agency's funding from $3 million to $18.7 million. Why him? A former aide to Governor Evan Bayh, O'Connor is now one of the most influential Democrats in Indiana. Bad press: His first election as county chair saw one of the biggest meltdowns in the state's history as hundreds of election workers didn't show. Gossip: O'Connor is said to be the mayor's closest advisor.

⬆ He is now chairman of the most Democratic county in the state.

"The only Daniels Hoosiers really wanted was the one named Jack."
